Vučić: We will all join the EU, but not soon

President of Serbia Aleksandar Vučić said that all candidate countries for membership in the European Union will eventually join, but that this will not happen soon. During the Conference of Parliament Speakers of Candidate Countries in Belgrade, Vučić emphasized the importance of accelerated implementation of reforms and regional cooperation, especially in the free flow of people, goods and capital. He stressed the need for a single market in the Western Balkans and expressed the expectation that Serbia, together with friendly countries, will resolve issues such as NIS and MOL.

Macut: We want Belgrade to be a regional Interpol centre

PM Đuro Macut and Interior Minister Ivica Dačić spoke with Interpol Secretary General Valdecy Urquiza about the establishment of a regional Interpol Bureau in Belgrade, which would improve cooperation in the fight against organized crime, terrorism and other international threats. Serbia is recognized as a key partner in Interpol due to its active involvement in the identification of smuggling routes and the use of Interpol's databases.

REM's independence is a fundamental question

Green-Left Front co-president Radomir Lazović said that the ruling party is trying to present formal changes in the Regulatory Authority for Electronic Media (REM) as progress, even though they do not bring real changes. He pointed out that the key question is whether REM can function as an independent institution, especially whether the majority in the Council is made up of people with authority who could protect the Serbian media scene.

Several countries against rewarding small progress

The European Union is still divided over whether Serbia has achieved the key reforms needed to open the negotiation cluster 3, which includes competitiveness and inclusive growth. The European Commission believes that Serbia has taken certain steps, such as strengthening the prosecution for organized crime and accepting the recommendations of the Venice Commission on judicial laws, but many EU members, including the Netherlands, Sweden and the Baltic countries, are against the opening of that cluster without essential changes in the area of judicial independence, the fight against corruption and the rule of law.
