Global energy market

Due to renewed hostilities in the Middle East, the world's oil markets are not resting. Due to the new uncertainty on the global market, the government has further reduced excise duties on fuel, so the total reduction until July 19 is 10%. In addition to the reduction of excise taxes, the state temporarily prohibits the export of oil and fuel until the end of July. Experts point out that state measures are necessary to mitigate the consequences of a renewed global disruption in supply, especially the rise in fuel prices. The government reduced the excise duty on fuel by 10% due to the increase in the price of crude oil on the world market.
