TOGETHER AGAINST HATE SPEECH AND MANIPULATION

The Regulatory Authority for Electronic Media (REM) has been constituted, but the president of the Council has not yet been elected, which is slowing down decision-making and work on approximately 1,700 complaints received over the past two years. The vote for Council president ended in a 4:4 tie, indicating a division among the members that could hamper important decisions, including monitoring the election campaign and appointing the management boards of public broadcasters. Experts stress the need to adopt a new statute and rules of procedure, as well as to exercise more active oversight of propaganda content and hate speech on national-frequency media.

INTERPOL REFUSES TO COOPERATE WITH SERBIA

Interpol has rejected Serbia's request to issue a wanted notice for a group of students and activists from Novi Sad, known as the "Novi Sad Six," who are living in exile. Attorney Željko Kočić said the reason was that the offence with which they are charged is considered a political offence, meaning that Serbia cannot use Interpol channels and police resources in relation to these individuals.

Serbia–Germany Cooperation; Ambassador's Farewell Visit; Economic Projects in Focus

The President of Serbia received Anke Konrad, Ambassador of the Federal Republic of Germany to Serbia, for a farewell visit. "A perfect opportunity to reaffirm with Ambassador Konrad our strong commitment to further strengthening economic, institutional and strategic cooperation between our two countries," President Vučić wrote on Instagram. He said the results of her engagement had left a lasting mark on relations between the two countries. The talks covered numerous capital projects, primarily in the fields of green transition and sustainable development, which have provided strong momentum to Serbia's economy.

Strengthening Our Companies Is a Prerequisite for the EU Single Market

Aleksandar Vučić and the Serbian Chamber of Commerce emphasise that strengthening domestic companies is essential for Serbia's successful entry into the EU single market, because domestic capital provides stability in times of crisis and remains in the country. The economy should focus on developing small and medium-sized enterprises as suppliers to large companies, creating local supply chains and reducing dependence on imports of inexpensive goods from distant markets.

Newly Elected Judges Sworn In Before Brnabić and Tomić

Newly elected judges took the oath of office in the National Assembly of Serbia before Parliament Speaker Ana Brnabić and Supreme Court President Miroljub Tomić. Tomić stressed the importance of impartial and independent adjudication in accordance with the Constitution and the law, as well as the judges' contribution to judicial reform aimed at creating a modern, efficient and independent judiciary.
