Macut: We Worked Honourably in the Interest of Our Country

The Serbian Parliament held a debate on a no-confidence vote in the Government at the opposition's request. The opposition was led by Miroslav Aleksić, who accused the authorities of corruption, crime and poor governance. Prime Minister Đuro Macut responded that the Government had worked honourably, achieved economic growth, implemented infrastructure projects and improved education and healthcare. Ministers rejected the accusations, citing financial and strategic contributions, while opposition MPs criticised individual government officials.

We Do Not Want Families Divided; We Want a United Country

Serbian President Aleksandar Vučić faced death threats, which he publicly condemned, stressing that he did not want families or the country to be divided, but rather Serbia to unite around a shared love of the homeland. Vučić expressed his willingness to forgive and emphasised that he did not feel threatened, calling for unity and concluding with support for Kragujevac's development and future projects such as the Clinical Centre and new factories. Government representatives, including Miloš Vučević, Adrijana Mesarović and Milica Đurđević Stamenkovski, condemned the threats and appealed for responsible political communication, pointing to the dangers of extreme statements and the importance of legal protection.
