Social protection; Inclusive assistant service; Changes to service rules

The Ministry of Labour, Employment, Veteran and Social Affairs has introduced new forms of social protection through amendments to the relevant rulebook, including an inclusive assistant for young people with intellectual disabilities after completing their education and an expanded supported-housing service. Residents of care institutions may now choose a trusted person to protect their rights, while citizens can use the "Radoslav" digital assistant to access information more easily. Preparations for implementation of the "Parent-Caregiver" Law from October 1 are also in their final stage.

Dačić: SPS to Continue Cooperation with SNS

Socialist Party of Serbia President Ivica Dačić said that the SPS is ready for the upcoming parliamentary and presidential elections after its Main Board made decisions on candidacies. He stressed that the SPS has not changed its policy based on patriotism and socialism, which he considers the foundation of the party. Dačić expressed satisfaction with the cooperation to date with the Serbian Progressive Party since 2012 and said that the coalition should continue if it receives the support of citizens.

State Fully Accepts Workers' Demands

Jelena Šikuljak, president of the Opstanak trade union, said that all demands made by employees of the Belgrade Pharmacy Institution had been fully accepted following a meeting with Serbian President Aleksandar Vučić, Health Minister Zlatibor Lončar and Finance Minister Siniša Mali. The state promised that all salary arrears would be paid in a single payment by September 15, health insurance cards would be validated starting tomorrow, and debts to suppliers would be settled. Conditions and funding for the institution's operation have also been secured for the first half of August.

VUČEVIĆ: VUČIĆ WILL RESIGN AND TAKE PART IN THE CAMPAIGN AS A PRIVATE CITIZEN

Serbian Progressive Party President Miloš Vučević announced that the election campaign would be intensive and focused on numerous smaller events across Serbia, with candidates engaging directly with citizens. The campaign will differ from previous ones because there will be no mass rallies in major cities, while the SNS will pay close attention to both content and conduct during the campaign. Vučević said that Serbian President and SNS member Aleksandar Vučić would resign after the elections are called and would participate in the campaign as an ordinary citizen.

Pastor: Situation with REM Is a Tragicomedy

Dr. Bálint Pásztor, president of the Alliance of Vojvodina Hungarians, described the situation surrounding the constitution of the REM Council as a tragicomedy, noting that candidate István Bodzsoni, who met all the requirements, had twice received the support of a majority of national councils but was not elected. Pásztor said that the SVM had been prepared to compromise and withdraw its demand for a ninth member in order to enable the establishment of REM and the opening of a new negotiating cluster with the EU.

Politics and government; Interior Ministry performance; Upcoming elections

Interior Minister Ivica Dačić told the RTS evening news that the parliamentary no-confidence debate had been a political performance without concrete arguments. He said the police were under considerable pressure and that work was underway to improve their status and security systems, including faster alerts for missing children. Dačić added that Serbia had sent firefighting assistance to Spain, appealed for caution in traffic and said his party was fully prepared for elections, assessing that continued cooperation with the SNS was in the country's best interest.
