Safety for Every Child

Minister of Labour, Employment, Veteran and Social Affairs Milica Đurđević Stamenkovski visited the Centre for the Protection of Infants, Children and Youth on Zvečanska Street in Belgrade, where the final phase of an EUR 11 million reconstruction project has been completed. The renovated facility is more modern and symbolises society's responsibility to provide safety and care for children who need it most. To date, 33,000 children and young people have passed through the centre, which strives to give them a carefree childhood and the opportunity to grow into happy and resilient people despite the difficulties they face.

No-confidence Debate; Parliamentary Vote; Opposition and Its Request

On the third day of the Serbian Parliament's extraordinary session on a no-confidence motion against the Government, which is drawing to a close, reporters announced that the vote would take place in the evening. Although the session was initiated in February over the General Staff case, MPs debated numerous other topics during the three-day discussion. Speaker of Parliament Ana Brnabić and the MPs continued working after 6 p.m., with the vote following the final addresses by the remaining speakers.

Serbian-American Heritage; Historical Alliance; Serbia-US Strategic Dialogue

Five members of the US Congress submitted a resolution proposing that February be designated Serbian-American Heritage Month. The initiative highlights the contribution of Serbs to American society since the 19th century, including the historical alliance, the work of Nikola Tesla and Operation Halyard. It was launched amid a historic improvement in bilateral relations in July 2026, which also included the launch of a strategic dialogue and the signing of the Artemis Accords with NASA.

Vučić Offers Condolences to the Government and People of Japan

Serbian President Aleksandar Vučić offered his condolences to the Government and people of Japan and to the families of those killed in a powerful magnitude 7.1 earthquake on the island of Kyushu, offering assistance and support. The death toll rose to at least 18, with around 62 people injured, while rescue teams continued searching for survivors beneath collapsed buildings, including a shopping centre in Kashima and a factory in the city of Yatsushiro, where five people were killed. Around 34,900 households were left without electricity and 15,000 without water, while more than 8,800 people were accommodated in evacuation centres.

Vučević: Pristina's Measures Are a Shameless Attempt to Erase the Serbian Name in Kosovo and Metohija

Miloš Vučević, president of the Serbian Progressive Party and adviser to the Serbian President for regional affairs, condemned the measures introduced by Pristina that will take effect on 1 August, describing them as an attempt to suppress Serbian identity in Kosovo and Metohija. According to Vučević, the measures represent an attack on the Serbian Orthodox Church and Serbian holy sites
