FIERCE BATTLE FOR BALLOT BOXES IN THE DIASPORA

The Republic Electoral Commission has so far designated 93 polling stations in 37 countries for Serbian citizens voting abroad in the October 25 election. The number of registered voters has risen to approximately 110,000, compared with around 40,000 in the 2023 election. The Students' List disputes the locations of some polling stations and the way voting times were determined, while the Ministry of Foreign Affairs says it followed the prescribed procedure. RIK President Vladimir Dimitrijević said changes are possible until the voter register is closed.

Possible Penalties over Vučić Ads Featuring Children

The Council of the Regulatory Authority for Electronic Media has launched proceedings against RTS, RTV, B92, Pink, Prva and K1 for broadcasting election campaign ads featuring children. Council member Rodoljub Šabić pointed to the legal ban on using minors for political purposes. Council President Stevica Smederevac confirmed that proceedings had been initiated, but stressed that this does not mean broadcasters' responsibility has been established in advance. According to the article, at least 11 such proceedings have been opened.

Failure to Invite Sends a Bad Message

The National Convention on the European Union called on Serbian institutions to invite a European Parliament observer delegation for the October 25 snap parliamentary election. The organization welcomed the arrival of the ODIHR mission and the invitation extended to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, but noted that the European Parliament had still not been invited. The NKEU said such an omission departs from the established practice of an EU candidate country. Its statement stressed that international observation serves to assess the electoral process, not to influence its outcome.

Political Blockade or Collapse of Vučić's Minister and Coalition Partner

The Democratic Alliance of Croats in Vojvodina will not take part in the upcoming snap parliamentary election, although it had regularly contested elections in the past. Party President Tomislav Žigmanov says an institutional blockade and internal obstruction prevented a decision on candidacy. Zoran Alimpić, a member of the Belgrade City Election Commission, offers a different interpretation and says the issue reflects the political weakening of the party. The article also examines the importance of minority lists for the future composition of parliament.

Serb List Warns About the Rights of Serbs

Representatives of the Serb List spoke with the new head of the EU Rule of Law Mission in Kosovo about the position of the Serbian community. According to a statement reported by TV Tanjug, they pointed to problems in exercising civil and political rights and to the treatment of Serbian representatives and local authorities. The Serb List claims there are institutional pressures that undermine legal certainty and the functioning of local self-governments. The claims are presented as the positions of its representatives.

Amend the Weapons Law

The lead candidate of the "Authentic Right - Dr Miloš Jovanović" electoral list criticized the new Law on Weapons and Ammunition, which is scheduled to take effect in April 2027. At a rally in Knjaževac, he said the conditions for acquiring and possessing weapons are overly restrictive, particularly for sport shooters. He called for a debate on more liberal solutions and announced that his coalition would seek to prevent the new law from taking effect. This is a campaign position of a candidate, not an adopted change to the law.
