Printing of Ballots Begins

Printing of ballots for the upcoming elections is scheduled to begin today at the Official Gazette printing house. This marks the start of one of the important technical phases in preparing for the vote scheduled for October 25. Preparation of election materials is part of the process preceding their distribution to polling boards. The organization and oversight of these activities are important for the proper conduct of the elections.

Danas

Wide Scope for Manipulation

Danas examines the published number of voters for the October 25 elections and objections concerning the reliability of the voter register. Interviewees warn of possible irregularities and call for transparent verification of the data ahead of voting. The accuracy of the voter register is becoming particularly important in the final stage of the campaign. The focus is on the ability to verify the records and on citizens' trust in the electoral process.

Riot Police Pushed Back Journalists and Citizens

The ANEM association said that police obstructed reporting by a KTV crew from an SNS gathering in Zrenjanin. The report also describes actions by riot police toward journalists and assembled citizens, raising the issue of freedom of media reporting. Such allegations once again raise questions about the conditions in which news crews cover political events. Of particular importance is the ability of the media to record events and inform the public without obstruction.

Post-Election Turmoil in the Serbian Democratic Party

An internal party dispute has opened in the Serbian Democratic Party in Republika Srpska following Branko Blanuša's decision to expel Ljubiša Petrović from the party. The article follows reactions and the political consequences of the decision for relations within the party. The expulsion raises questions about the future position of party officials and the SDS's internal unity. The development of the conflict could affect the party's organization and political activity.

Distrust Between Skopje and Sofia

Relations between Skopje and Sofia remain burdened by mutual distrust despite attempts to renew political dialogue. Disputes between North Macedonia and Bulgaria remain important for both regional relations and European integration. The disagreements weigh on cooperation between the two neighboring countries and on the possibility of reaching a lasting compromise. Resolving them is also significant for North Macedonia's progress on its European path.

RTS1

Election Campaign by Parties in Serbia

The Republic Electoral Commission announced that 6,450,523 voters have been registered for the upcoming parliamentary elections. RTS's election campaign overview also presented the activities of political lists in the final stage of the campaign. Data on the number of voters are an important part
