Consumers paid as much as 100,000 dinars in advance

Gas consumers from Stara Pazova, Indija, Beška, Batajnica and Ruma say Srbijagas has not recognized advance payments made to their previous supplier, Gas Feromont. Srbijagas took over supplies on December 1, 2025, and residents say they were not informed of the change in a timely manner. Some customers prepaid as much as 100,000 dinars and are now demanding that those payments be credited to their accounts.

Price exceeds 50,000 dinars per ton

The price of wood pellets in Serbia has exceeded 50,000 dinars per ton and reaches 52,000 dinars at some fuel depots. The article says stronger demand, partly driven by more expensive electricity, has pushed prices higher, while last year pellet prices rose from around 30,000 to 42,000 dinars. Prices have also risen elsewhere in the region, leaving consumers facing ever-higher heating costs.

Airfares are soaring too

European airfares could rise by 10 to 20 percent over the next year, Ryanair CEO Michael O'Leary warned. He cited rising aviation fuel costs and reduced available capacity in the market as the main reasons. The projected trend could particularly affect passengers using low-cost flights.

RUSSIAN GAS AS A BARGAINING CHIP FOR PEACE

According to The New York Times, as reported by Večernje Novosti, the US administration is considering a return to higher imports of Russian gas into Europe as part of a possible peace agreement. The proposal includes restoring gas transit through Ukraine, which would generate revenue for that country and give European buyers access to the energy source. The article says Kyiv and the European Union oppose the idea and also discusses Serbia's position as a buyer of Russian gas.

THE BATTLE FOR EVERY KILOMETER

In response to fluctuating fuel prices, higher tolls and inflation, transport companies in Serbia are changing how they organize freight shipments. The article highlights consolidating smaller consignments, digitally finding return loads and arranging protection against changes in energy prices as ways to cut costs. The aim is to use vehicle capacity more efficiently and limit the extent to which price increases are passed on to end consumers.

INVESTING IN ETHNO-TOURISM

Rural tourism offers owners of old family properties an opportunity to earn additional income by renovating and renting them out. The article estimates that annual business revenue could reach 20,000 euros, following initial investment in renovation and furnishing. Smaller houses, especially properties of around 50 square meters, are highlighted as practical to maintain and appealing to couples and smaller families.
