VUČIĆ'S SIX-POINT PLAN FOR SERBIA

The "Aleksandar Vučić – United Serbia" electoral list presented six key priorities of its program on RTS ahead of the October 25 parliamentary elections. These include improvements in healthcare and water supply, higher wages and pensions, development of southern and eastern Serbia, reform of the Government's work, and depoliticization of education. Aleksandar Vučić, Miloš Vučević, Ana Brnabić and Siniša Mali spoke about the plans.

Intimidation of citizens ahead of historic elections

Police arrested five people in Novi Sad and one person in Kraljevo on suspicion of involvement in planning violence on the day of the parliamentary elections. The Higher Public Prosecutor's Office says the suspects were preparing riots and attacks on police officers and political opponents. Danas interviewees, including Predrag Voštinić, Radivoje Jovović and Vladimir Terzić, describe the arrests as an attempt to intimidate voters and activists. These are their allegations, not established facts.

Citizen Vučić is very frightened, so he is making things harder for the diaspora

A total of 102,147 Serbian citizens registered to vote abroad, but only 93 polling stations were opened, forcing some voters to travel hundreds of kilometers. A Danas interviewee in Austria describes traveling from Klagenfurt to Vienna to vote, even though Graz is closer. The article also reports objections to the distribution of polling stations and voting according to the time in Serbia; these objections were rejected by the Administrative Court.

Of 18 electoral lists, seven may be phantom lists

Danas analyzes the electoral lists registered for the parliamentary elections and points to suspicions that some lack genuine political support. Out of 18 lists, the article identifies seven as potentially phantom lists, examining their composition and political activity. This characterization is presented as an analysis and suspicion, not an officially established irregularity.
