Let Voters Decide in Peace Who to Vote For

An election silence period has begun in Serbia ahead of the snap parliamentary elections scheduled for Sunday, October 25. It will last until polling stations close at 8 p.m. During this period, the presentation of candidates and their platforms in the media and in public, as well as calls for voters to support particular electoral lists, are prohibited. The article explains the rules intended to allow voters to make their decisions without direct campaigning.

Vasiljević: Security of the Electoral Process Is a Priority

The Higher Public Prosecutor's Office in Belgrade questioned six people suspected of planning violence and unrest on the day of the parliamentary elections. Those questioned include citizens of Serbia, Croatia, and Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the suspicions also concern possible attacks on political opponents and police officers. The report conveys the authorities' position that the security of the electoral process is a priority, while noting that the individuals concerned are suspects.

Regional Stability Is a Goal and an Essential Need

Serbia's caretaker Prime Minister Đuro Macut said at the Berlin Process Summit in Montenegro that full membership in the European Union remains Serbia's strategic goal. He emphasized the implementation of reforms under the Growth Plan for the Western Balkans and gradual alignment with the EU single market. He described regional stability as an essential requirement for the region's security and economic progress.

A Political Question to Be Decided Primarily by Washington

Sources interviewed by Danas believe that the Kosovo authorities' initiative to turn Bondsteel into a permanent U.S. military base is primarily political in nature. Kosovo Prime Minister Albin Kurti reiterated the request during contacts with U.S. senators. Any change to the base's status would be decided by Washington, rather than by the authorities in Pristina alone.

REM Council Meeting Not Held Due to Lack of Quorum

An electronic session of the Council of the Regulatory Authority for Electronic Media (REM) was not held because of a lack of quorum. The agenda included consideration of whether to initiate proceedings against several broadcasters, including TV Informer, TV Prva, and TV N1, over possible violations of the Law on Electronic Media. REM announced that the unaddressed agenda items would be carried over to the next session.
