Is it more valuable to invest in an apartment or in gold

The real estate market in Serbia continued to grow in value, although the number of sales did not increase at the same pace. The average value of apartments in circulation increased from around 65,500 euros at the end of 2021 to almost 90,000 euros in 2025, while the price of a fine ounce of investment gold increased from around 1,609 to 3,669 euros in the same period. The text points out the different characteristics of these two forms of investment: real estate can bring rental income, while gold has greater liquidity and easier diversification.

They offer pensioners products 33 times more expensive than the purchase price

Market inspection controls companies that offer massagers and similar products to pensioners by phone, at their home address or at presentations at prices many times higher than the purchase prices. According to the mentioned examples, some products were sold more than 30 times more expensive, with claims of alleged health effects or state benefits. The law does not limit the trading margin, but prohibits misleading and aggressive business practices, and fines and other measures are provided for established violations.

Important criteria include price, supplier experience, fuel supply, financing and the overall package that the state can get.

The customer is a company they associate with the government

JAT apartments on Kopaonik were sold to the MONTVISION company for 5.17 million euros, which was the initial price, the Ministry of Economy announced. Although three interested entities purchased the sales documents, only one offer arrived by the deadline. Today, it is reminiscent of BIRN's earlier writing about the connections of the company's owner with the then director of BIA, Bratislav Gašić, while in the official documentation the buyer is listed as MONTVISION.
