No decision before the elections in Serbia

Pressure is growing within the European People’s Party to review the status of the Serbian Progressive Party, following public criticism from some members of that political group. Danas sources do not expect a final decision before the elections in Serbia, although, according to the article, a procedure concerning the SNS’s associate membership has been initiated.

“Principal takes part in SNS campaign”

Parents of students at the “Jovan Jovanović Zmaj” Grammar School in Novi Sad accused school principal Radivoje P. Stojković of becoming involved in the SNS election campaign. In a statement, they linked his activities to earlier disputes at the school, while the article reports their allegations and recalls previous complaints filed against the principal.

In New York, I will speak about all the deceptions we have been through Serbian President Aleksandar Vučić announced that at the UN General Assembly he would speak about Serbia’s international position, the country’s European path, and relations with countries of the Global South. He identified the position and security of Serbs in Kosovo and Metohija as one of the key topics, and also spoke about talks with international partners regarding NIS and energy supply.
