Abundant harvest lowered food prices this summer

An analysis by the Foundation for the Advancement of Economics (FREN) shows that overall inflation in Serbia slowed significantly during the summer, reaching 2.2% in August, helped by a good food harvest. At the same time, core inflation remains among the highest in Europe, indicating that domestic price pressures have not fully subsided.

Even the RSD 6,000 aid payment is being seized

The one-time government aid payment of RSD 6,000, like other social welfare benefits, cannot be subject to enforced collection. Večernje novosti reports that some citizens nevertheless complained that their banks had transferred the funds to enforcement officers, prompting the Efektiva association to advise them to request an immediate refund.
